the particulars of which have been fully given in the Hamalp, and which it will be remembered originated in a suit connected with work on the streets, under direction of the old Street Department, the Judge has made an order vacating the judgment against the city. The judgment was for $460,000.

> COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS. An Alleged Hotel Thief on Trial. Before Recorder Backett.

Mr. Fellows yesterday moved on the case of William J. Barciay siles Bailey, who it will be remembered was convicted a few days since of stealing in the Grand Hotel, but for whom his counsel, Mr was spent in procuring a jury, the counsel having put numerous questions to the jurors respecting their impartiality. Some of the gentlemen tried the accused the other day, and although they believed the prisoner guilty upon the evidence adduced then, they could give an impartial verdict on the second trial. This was in response to a question put by the Recorder, according to the provisions of the new jury law passed by the last Legislature.

Mr. Howe excepted to his Honor's ruling for the purpose of testing the constitutionality of the act.

The jury having been sworn, Mr. John H. Morrell, who occupies a suit of rooms at the Grand Hotel, testified that on the morning of the 11th of this month he was awakened by his wife; jumped out of bed and saw the prisoner making his exis from the parlor door; a diamond stud, worth see, and a pocketbook containing $18, were removed from the bureau of the bedroom, and a ter the robbery was discovered the property was found by a servant in the hallway.

pocketbook containing $18, were removed from the bureau of the bedroom, and a ter the robbery was discovered the property was found by a servant in the hallway.

Mrs. Jennie Morrell gave an interesting narrative of the occurrence, stating that on the morning in question she was lying on the bed apparently asleep, when she saw the prisoner open the folding doors which separate the parior from the bedroom, and then go the bureau. He put his right hand on Mr. Morrell's pocketbook, and with his left he pushed the full set of stude which were on the bureau. She sprang from the bed with the intention of locking the door leading from the parior to the hall, but found that the key had been placed on the outside. As she could not lock it, she put her back against the door, and took hold of the knob with her left hand; the prisoner came towards her, and she took hold of his clothing with her right hand. All this time she shouted for her husband to come, who sprang suddenly from the bed and, in his haste to got to her, he fell at the folding doors, which were about one-third open. Before he reached her the prisoner had succeeded in wrenching her hand from the door knob, and Mr. Morrell reached her in time to see the prisoner's back as he went down the nail. He followed the prisoner, who was brought back to the room in a lew minutes, and fully identified by her. This was five minutes, and fully identified by her. This was five minutes, and thing the morning.

Mr. Howe was particular in bringing out the fact that Mr. Morrill had exclusive control of the rooms, and although the objection to the indictment was not made, the supposition is that before the case is nished he will olaim that there is a fatal flaw in the indictment.
